* Highlighted boxes show suggested lessons where the majority of material corresponds or significant portions overlap with student reading. Note, over half of suggested lessons have very little or no relationship to student reading, especially after the mid point of the year. At one point during weeks 18-20, the lesson schedule has a near perfect correlation with student reading.

*The closest lesson column shows which lesson you'd teach from the manual if you wanted to use stick as closely as possible to the lesson manual to match your teaching with student reading. There are three weeks (highlighted above) during which you'd need to come up with your own unique lesson or combine lessons as suggested in column headed by "Lessons arranged by student reading". You could do scripture mastery on these weeks, but I have found that students who put in the time to do reading prefer to have lessons based on the material they have read.
